

Since Indiana's telephone privacy laws went into affect, I have had perhaps one call per month...

Before I was getting 4 or more calls a day on most days. I absolutely do not want a national law that allows the calls to increase. I'm tired of my phone line being tied up by callers I don't even know.

On a further note, any law that is put into place should outlaw automated calls (i.e. recordings...anything other than a live person on the other end of the phone). I have had recordings that "locked" into my phone line where I was unable to break the connection until their recording ended.

If there had been an emergency in my home during the half hour of recorded messages and push-the-button response survey, I would have been unable to call for help.
